

School start

Purpose

School starting may be boring - and it is. BUT wait! It has a purpose, or at least in premise

A quote from the creators of html

COMMENTS AND OTHER MARKUP

To include comments in an HTML document that will be ignored by the parser, surround them with `<!--` and `-->`. After the comment delimiter, all text up to the next occurrence of `--` is ignored. Hence comments cannot be nested. Whitespace is allowed between the closing `--` and `>`. (But not between the opening `<!--` and `--`.)
`-- 1993 Tim Berners-Lee, CERN & Atrium Daniel Connolly`

The above quote was from the original RFC for HTML by Tim Berners-Lee, CERN & Atrium Daniel Connolly in June of 1993. It is sacred to us

HTML0

~ Link to The best version of HTML! ~

The above text may be subjective as the original version of HTML is seen as outdated by some

Back to the story

School has a purpose, yes you heard it here last. To learn, or at least that's what it's supposed to do, in most cases most of what you learn you never actually use as an adult